WHO: Palmdale Mayor Jim Ledford; Palmdale City Councilmembers and staff; Transplants owners Matthew Luker, Sarah Luker, Jim Kasara, Charles Cordovano; Lucky Luke owners Brian and Samantha Schmitz; guests from Yeastside Brewers of Los Angeles; and local craft beer enthusiasts.

BACKGROUND: Transplants Brewing Company focuses on hoppy west coast ales and creative specialties. We strive to brew inventive and flavorful creations and are always brainstorming new ideas and approaches for our beer. Just as Los Angeles attracts collects random people from all over the world (our team originally hails from Chicago, New York and Arkansas), our specialty beer recipes draw from diverse, worldly and ethnic influences which often blur the lines between culinary and brewing sensibilities. In both senses, Transplants Brewing Company truly is "Ales for the Unrooted."

Lucky Luke Brewing Company came to life simply from the love of craft beer. Construction started in spring of 2015. The original vision was to make the brewery a tribute to othe founder's great-grandfather, Luke Hammons. Luke was a lover of all things craft and American made. He was a family man and patriarch, who enjoyed working with his hands and could build just about anything. While he passed away in 2009, he would have been proud to see Lucky Luke's staff building things from scratch, buying American wherever possible, and raising a glass with loved ones.

Lucky Luke's aims to create an environment that is casual and comfortable---here patrons are surrounded by those who are also passionate about what they do. Lucky Luke's does not have a kitchen; however, guests are welcome to bring in food to enjoy in the Tasting Room.

The Yeastside Brewers are a group of like-minded homebrewers who call Northeast Los Angeles home. Their primary concerns are the exploration and production of fantastic beers as well as involvement and sharing with the community in which they live. They meet monthly and typically a brew session at someone's house, or a gathering at a local brewery or beer bar.
